
Title: The Fate of Men

Author: Merlin the wizard

In the east, there was a man who was
walking in the market
of Trinsic when he
came face to face with Death himself. The
man noticed an
expression of surprise
on the ghoul's horrid
face, but they passed
one another without speaking a word. The man was quite
frightened, and asked
the wise man of the
town of what he should do. The wise
man concluded that
Death had probably
come to Trinsic to get
him the next morning.

The poor man was so
horrified at this that
he asked if anything
could be done so that he could escape. The only way they could
think of between them
was that the victim
should ride all night
to Vesper, thus
eluding Death and his
bringings.

So this man did ride
all night to Vesper. It
was a horrible ride,
with Trolls hunting
him down every step,
and murderers hiding
behind every tree
beside the road. When then man finally did
manage to reach
Vesper, he strolled
past the bank the next morning.

Congratulating
himself on eluding

Death, he was right
then confronted with
the specter himself.
The ghoul then said
that he had come for
him, and he must go.
The terrified man
exclaimed, "WHY?! I
though I just met you
in Trinsic yesterday."
Death replied,
"Exactly. That is
why i looked so
suprised-for i had
been told to meet you
here today in Vesper..."
So it is no good trying
to avoid one's
destiny.No matter
how hard a person
tries to, what is
pre-ordained will
turn out in the end.